Required textbooks (ISBN # included) and materials

Aristotle. Trans. Joe Sachs. Nicomachean Ethics. Newburyport: Focus Publishing, 2002. Print. ISBN: 1585100358

Rachels, James, and Stuart Rachels. The Elements of Moral Philosophy. 8th ed. Boston: McGraw-Hill, 2012. Print. ISBN: 9780078119064

Additional course requirements

You will need to have access to a word processor to write your papers and will want a camera or microphone to use Canvas's Media Comment Tool. PowerPoint presentations also have to be opened and viewed.

Required assignments & Academic calendar

Due dates for assignments are scheduled using the Calendar function in Canvas. If assignment due dates change as we move through the semester, Canvas will notify you. In case of inclement weather, emergency closings, or other unforeseen disruptions to scheduled classes, students should log in to their Canvas accounts for directions on how to continue their class work.

Methods of instruction & support services

Classes are taught through lecture, class interaction, quizzes, and discussions requiring preparation and participation from students in the form of both written and oral communication.

Students requiring technical help should use GC's help desk to resolve problems (help.grayson.edu). Students seeking writing help should use GC's writing center (1st floor of the library, writingcenter@grayson.edu) as an additional resource.

Overview of assignments, instruction, and evaluation

Below is an overview of the semester. An additional file will outline the full details of the schedule.

The complete schedule is a separate document and is subject to change with announcements being made in class. The two units are associated with the two books used in the course.

Unit 1: Learning Philosophical Terms and Arguments through Meta-ethics and Reading Aristotle's Nicomachean Ethics

Unit 2: Learning Philosophical Terms and Arguments through Normative Theories of Modern Ethics and Reading Rachels and Rachels's The Elements of Moral Philosophy

How to be Successful

1. Log-in at least 3 times each week to Canvas, and communicate with peers and professor. Devote 3 hours each week as class time and 3-6 hours each week with homework.
2. Ask for help when you need it.
3. Complete all assignments as scheduled.
4. Do the extra credit of sending formal papers to the writing center.

Grading

Categories	Each	Total Points

How will students be notified of grades? Grades are posted in Canvas

Final grades posted in student portals

Rubrics used: Rubrics prepared by professor and displayed with assignments in Canvas

A = performance of outstanding quality

B = superior, but less than exemplary performance

C = adequate performance meeting standards

D = performance that marginally meets minimum standards

F = performance falls below standards or lacks academic integrity

Criteria for Evaluating Assignments:

Appropriateness: The work responds to the assignment and addresses the main topic with a purpose clearly and precisely stated in formal papers with a thesis statement.

Clarity of exposition and argument: Clear explanations of positions and concepts as well as critical evaluation of arguments are given. All parts of an argument, both strengths and weaknesses are considered. When appropriate, positions are qualified and fully supported. All arguments are supported through evidence and careful reasoning. Arguments anticipate objections to the writer's point of view and provide a response to those objections. Glaring errors in logic are absent.

Fairness to positions: Alternative positions are fairly explained, and when appropriate, concessions and refutations are offered to opposing views.

Coherence of explanations and arguments: The work as a whole makes sense and is well organized so that reader or listeners are able to make connections between steps within an argument and connections between alternative positions. Support and evidence are provided for all claims.

Mechanics and Grammar: Conventions of Standard American English are properly used. Formal papers provide MLA documentation of sources and formatting.

All assessment attempts to reward students for what they have accomplished. If at any time during the semester, you think that your work has not been fully appreciated for its merits, please see your professor privately to review your contribution to the course in both its written and oral form.

Course and instructor policies—late work, participation, and attendance

Descriptions of Late Work Policy: No late work is accepted.

Class Participation: Students are expected to have completed reading and writing assignments as scheduled.

Academic success is closely associated with regular classroom attendance and course participation. All successful students, whether on campus or online, are expected to be self-motivated. You are required to participate in courses regularly and are obliged to participate in class activities and complete and submit assignments following my instructions. Students taking courses during compressed semester time frames such as mini-mester, summer sessions, and mid-semester should plan to spend significantly more time per week on the course. Responsibility for work missed because of illness or school business is yours. More than two absences are considered to be excessive. In addition, your eligibility to receive financial aid or live in a college dormitory can be affected by withdrawal from courses. If you withdraw, any tuition refund would be made in accordance with state regulations.

Student Conduct & Discipline

Students should behave respectfully toward each other and their professor. If they feel offended or somehow disrespected, they should discuss the matter privately with their professor either (1) in person, (2) via the phone, or (3) through Canvas messages. They should question individual grades privately using the same formats noted above, but general grading and assignment concerns should be brought up with the entire class present to benefit from clarification or extended explanations.

On a personal note: I may come across as overly formal, “corny,” or “old-fashioned,” but I prefer to use salutations in Canvas messages such as “Dear” as a reminder to myself that I care about the person I am addressing. Students have enjoyed returning the formal greeting as a favor to me. I believe that it sets the tone in a positive way for the kind of discourse that promotes learning. Use formal writing in all of your communications, including Canvas messages. I am happy being addressed as Dr. S since Sorensen is a long name to type.

Academic integrity

The faculty expect students to demonstrate responsibility and academic honesty. Because the value of an academic degree depends upon the integrity of the work done by the student for that degree, a student must demonstrate individual honor in his or her scholastic work.

Any student who commits an act of scholastic dishonesty is subject to discipline. Scholastic dishonesty includes but is not limited to cheating, plagiarism, collusion, submitting for credit any work or materials that are attributable in whole or in part to another person, taking an examination for another person, any act designed to give unfair advantage to a student, or the attempt to commit such acts.

Plagiarism, for example, from the Web, from portions of papers for other classes, and from any other source, is unacceptable and will be dealt with under the college’s policy on plagiarism (see GC Student Handbook for details). Grayson College subscribes to turnitin.com, which allows faculty to search the Web and identify plagiarized material. Plagiarized papers in this course will receive a “0.” Furthermore, students may fail the entire course for plagiarizing.
